

COMMUNITY AMBASSADOR OVERVIEW

111 project

Churches in every community are already connected to networks, denominations, and organizations as they engage in ministry. These organizations are ideal partners for 111Project as we grow the CarePortal platform, and within these organizations, leaders are working to help churches and community leaders partner to serve their communities and care for children and families in crisis. These leaders are ideal 111Project Ambassadors, who serve as leading relational ministry experts for churches and community champions within their own networks. Ambassadors are supported by the 111Project Regional Manager and Community Coordinator, as well as, the 111Project Executive Team (Executive Director and Operations Director).

A person would love this role if God has given them a vision for the Church to answer the call to care for the vulnerable and a natural ability to network clergy and community leaders.

You might be a Community Ambassador if these describe you...

Calling | Someone would fit this profile if they are actively networking churches and organizations together to enhance the care of children and families in the community, or if they are willing to do this networking with some additional support, vision and training.

Capacity | Ambassadors are typically individuals who see engaging churches in the mission of 111Project through CarePortal as a natural extension of what they already do, not a burdensome addition to their job description. They may be serving as pastors or ministry leaders, working for area non-profits, or are simply passionate advocates who have established credibility with churches.

Curious what a Community Ambassador does?

- Recruit new churches into their network and serve as the primary point of contact to help each church get activated on the CarePortal platform. Each church is assigned to one ambassador with the Implementing Partner they've signed up with.
- Develop new community partnerships who want to partner with the Church to respond to local requests. This could include Community Champions who manage their own CarePortal account and respond to local churches to help with specific requests as well as Community Sponsors who seek to help the local Implementing Partner grow and fund their staff team to serve the network.
- Engage and equip current churches and other responders to use the CarePortal platform to go deeper in their efforts and maturity as they work together to meet local requests. One measurable goal in connection with this work could be to increase the number and size of CarePortal response teams at each church.
